

TOP STORIES

Accused killer Bruce McArthur's 2003 assault conviction led to DNA order

Though the DNA was taken over a decade ago, former Toronto police homicide cop Mark Valois said it's "absolutely" possible that information aided in his most recent arrest.

- Police release two locations linked to Bruce McArthur
- Investigation into accused killer's use of dating apps stokes tension in Toronto's Gay Village
- Project Houston focused on three missing men in Gay Village between 2010 and 2012

"Police release two locations linked to Bruce McArthur."

Though the DNA was taken over a decade ago, former Toronto police homicide cop Mark Valois said it's "absolutely" possible that information aided in his most recent arrest.

CANADA Vancouver's poverty moves to the burbs	CANADA 'The dam has broken': Vancouver's theatre scene making change
GTA $10, one kind thought and a million lives changed: How one woman in downtown ...	OPINION Vinay Menon: Chicago West might be where stars' dumb-name habit goes to...
Vancouver's poverty moves to the burbs	Vancouver's poverty moves to the burbs
'The dam has broken': Vancouver's theatre scene making change after high ...	'The dam has broken': Vancouver's theatre scene making change after high ...
$10, one kind thought and a million lives changed: How one woman in downtown ...	$10, one kind thought and a million lives changed: How one woman in downtown ...
Vinay Menon: Chicago West might be where stars' dumb-name habit goes to...	Vinay Menon: Chicago West might be where stars' dumb-name habit goes to...
Peter Howell: The Shape of Water is the Oscars' best pick for #MeToo times	Peter Howell: The Shape of Water is the Oscars' best pick for #MeToo times
Burlington mom delivers own baby along highway in Oakville	Burlington mom delivers own baby along highway in Oakville

Brampton's only "Boutique" Retirement Home

Click for more information

Receive individualized attention. Short term or trial stays available

905-846-1441

TALKING POINTS

Ontario-shot 'Shape of Water' lands a leading 13 Oscar nods

Cosby took the stage for about an hour Monday night at a Philadelphia jazz club for his first show since May 2015.

'I used to be a comedian': Bill Cosby performs 1st show since sex abuse scandal

Cosby took the stage for about an hour Monday night at a Philadelphia jazz club for his first show since May 2015.

Vancouver's poverty moves to the burbs

'The dam has broken': Vancouver's theatre scene making change after high ...

$10, one kind thought and a million lives changed: How one woman in downtown ...

Vinay Menon: Chicago West might be where stars' dumb-name habit goes to...

Peter Howell: The Shape of Water is the Oscars' best pick for #MeToo

Burlington mom delivers own baby along highway in Oakville

NEWS AND FEATURES

Advertisement

Learn More

Get the morning headlines delivered to your inbox

Enter Your Email

WORLD

Sessions is interviewed in Mueller's Russia investigation, the first

CLIMATE

Why citizen scientists are becoming a critical piece of the clean water movement and how stream water in Edmonton

SCIENCE

The science behind why things are the opposite of what they should be

WOMEN'S RIGHTS

Why these top Vancouver companies don't believe in women

QUEEN'S PARK

Guilt in gas plants boondoggle disguises original sin

Your favourite shampoo is now made with micellar water

Sponsored Links by Taboola

It's how we build a community. See how we're building Toronto at ontario.ca/buildON

OPINION

COMMUNITY

Six ways to change the world this weekend — without leaving Vancouver

SCIENCE

The science behind why things are the opposite of what they should be

OPINION

Gillian Steward: Calgary wooing the Olympic Winter Games once again

GTA

GTA

Bringing World Cup matches to Toronto could be the catalyst for something bigger

Hosting smaller events may be a valuable exercise in taking stock, looking at projects that could be done.

- Police release two locations linked to Bruce McArthur
- Investigation into accused killer's use of dating apps stokes tension in Toronto's Gay Village

"Police release two locations linked to Bruce McArthur."

Though the DNA was taken over a decade ago, former Toronto police homicide co.

GTA

Top speed skater Viktor Ahn among Russian athletes barred from Pyeongchang Olympics

GTA

Rounding out the all-star rosters on an unofficial ballot

OPINION

Maple Leafs need to find their stride in the stretch run

QUEEN'S PARK

Guilt in gas plants boondoggle disguises original sin

LOCAL

Your favourite shampoo is now made with micellar water

Sponsored Links by Taboola

LOCAL

Kobe Bryant is an Oscar nominee with short film 'Dear Basketball'

OPINION

Thomas Walkom: What did the Vancouver summit on North Korea accomplish?

SPORTS

Gillian Steward: Calgary wooing the Olympic Winter Games once again

CLIMATE

Why citizen scientists are becoming a critical piece of the clean water movement and how

SCIENCE

The science behind why things are the opposite of what they should be

MUSIC

Nashville's soap-opera animals have turned into vegetables

MUSIC

South African jazz musician Hugh Masekela dies at 78

TripAdvisor has named the best all-inclusive resorts — here's how to book them

Sponsored Links by Taboola

LIFE

GTA

Accused killer Bruce McArthur's 2003 assault conviction

MUSIC

Nashville's soap-opera animals have turned into vegetables

CLIMATE

Why citizen scientists are becoming a critical piece of the clean water

Though the DNA was taken over a decade ago, former Toronto police homicide cop Mark Valois said it's "absolutely" possible that information aided in his most recent arrest.

- Police release two locations linked to Bruce McArthur
- Investigation into accused killer's use of dating apps stokes tension in Toronto's Gay Village
- Police release two locations linked to Bruce McArthur
- Investigation into accused killer's use of dating apps stokes tension in Toronto's Gay Village

GTA

Top speed skater Viktor Ahn among Russian athletes barred from Pyeongchang Olympics

GTA

Rounding out the all-star rosters on an unofficial ballot

Clear your mind Three tips to increase productivity	Kling St. project Streetcar travel times slashed	New subway line Toronto, where's your impatience?	Falling Why falling can lead to success	Toronto FC Plan aims to boost visitors to King St.	Bentway Plan aims to boost visitors to King St.
--	---	--	--	---	--

- thestar.com
- Feedback
 - Site Map
 - Newsletters
 - New in Homes
 - Star Store
 - StarAuctions
 - Corrections
 - Today's News
 - Flyers
 - CanadaStays
 - Contests

- Toronto Star Newspapers Ltd.
- About
 - Atkinson Principles
 - Statement of Principles
 - Glossary
 - Trust Project
 - Subscribe
 - Manage My Subscription
 - Contact Us
 - Contact Webmaster
 - FAQ
 - News Releases
 - Star Internships
 - Careers @ the Star
 - Star Advisers
 - Star ePaper Edition
 - Reprint and License

- Advertising
- Advertising with Us
 - Special Features

- Initiatives
- Santa Claus Fund
 - Fresh Air Fund
 - Speakers Bureau
 - Classroom Connection
 - Toronto Star Archives

Opinion

Women's March: A year later, women are reshaping the future

By Shree Paradkar Columnist
Sat., Jan. 20, 2018

Facebook Twitter Print More

The second Women's March in Toronto was one of at least 38 rallies across the country and hundreds around the globe. The theme of Toronto's march was defining a new future. On Saturday, that future looked diverse and Indigenous, writes Shree Paradkar.

Was it only two years ago that we read headlines such as "Feminism is over, the battle is won. Time to move on?"

The Toronto Women's March represented a striking change in the fundamental make up of Canadian feminism. It's a change that came about when the long-standing leadership of intersectional feminists — women of varied backgrounds, races, ethnicities, sexualities, abilities, trans women, immigrant women and other marginalized women — gained visibility and prominence. (Shree Paradkar, Toronto Star).

Last year, rising fundamentalism around the world with Donald Trump's election as U.S. president at its pinnacle exposed the vulnerability of hard-fought women's rights that were considered done and dusted. The threat galvanized millions of people to take to the streets across the globe, smashing bystanderism and launching a pipeline of young leaders.

One year later, some of those young women led the thousands who gathered in Toronto on Saturday for the second Women's March, one of at least 38 rallies in the country, with the mission of "inspiring, unifying and leading the charge for advancement of women across Canada."

When Rana Nasrazadani spoke of systemic barriers to ableism, thanking her supporters as well as those who tried to hold her back, and Zainab Arkani brought people to tears with stories of atrocities against her fellow Rohingyas, and Kassandra Neranjan hailed the power of unacknowledged, impoverished female heroes of colour, and Janelle Hinds talked about the importance of hope for young Black girls, they expanded the scope of feminist focus to include white supremacy, immigration and refugee rights.

When Jessica Bolduc talked of walking for the future that is lost and the future that wants to emerge, she folded into feminist resistance the tragedies of murdered and missing Indigenous women and girls.

Together, the dozen women on stage represented a striking change in the fundamental makeup of Canadian feminism. It's a change that came about when the long-standing leadership of intersectional feminists — women of varied backgrounds, races, ethnicities, sexualities, abilities, trans women, immigrant women and other marginalized women — gained visibility and prominence.

They (white feminists) were really hearing for the first time," says acclaimed Canadian women's rights activist, journalist and author, Michele Landsberg, of recent changes. "Not saying we will include you, but quite the reverse, saying I want to be part of your movement and I want to be an ally and how can I support this.

"That's been a struggle always in the movement. Because white women are sort of the way men are in the patriarchy. That's our world. We don't question our privilege as white people. It's invisible to us as the air we breathe. That's something we've all had to struggle with. It's a painful, inner, solitary struggle that every woman has to undertake. And not everyone is willing to do it."

Thousands gathered in Toronto on Saturday for the second Women's March. (Andrew Francis Wallace, Toronto Star)

When it comes to resistance, a march has the power to mobilize the huddled masses, to energize the populace, and to foster solidarity of purpose even among those with divergent views.

When it comes to a march of resistance that is global in scope and is billed as the largest single day protest, the impact is magnified and manifold.

Last year's march was a moment born out of fear and shock and rage and outrage following Trump's election and in awareness that U.S. leadership influenced global policies.

Story continued below....

You might be interested in

- Analysis | Daniel Dale: Marches against Trump turn into a wave of Democratic women running for office
- Canadians join global women's marches on one-year anniversary of Trump inauguration
- Women's marches return to streets around the globe to rally against Trump, sexual assault

Together, the dozen women on stage represented a striking change in the fundamental makeup of Canadian feminism. It's a change that came about when the long-standing leadership of intersectional feminists — women of varied backgrounds, races, ethnicities, sexualities, abilities, trans women, immigrant women and other marginalized women — gained visibility and prominence.

"They (white feminists) were really hearing for the first time," says acclaimed Canadian women's rights activist, journalist and author, Michele Landsberg, of recent changes. "Not saying we will include you, but quite the reverse, saying I want to be part of your movement and I want to be an ally and how can I support this.

Related Reads

Analysis | Daniel Dale: Marches against Trump turn into a wave of Democratic women running for office

Canadians join global women's marches on one-year anniversary of Trump inauguration

Women's marches return to streets around the globe to rally against Trump, sexual assault

"That's been a struggle always in the movement. Because white women are sort of the way men are in the patriarchy. That's our world. We don't question our privilege as white people. It's invisible to us as the air we breathe. That's something we've all had to struggle with. It's a painful, inner, solitary struggle that every woman has to undertake. And not everyone is willing to do it."

When it comes to resistance, a march has the power to mobilize the huddled masses, to energize the populace, and to foster solidarity of purpose even among those with divergent views.

When it comes to a march of resistance that is global in scope and is billed as the largest single day protest, the impact is magnified and manifold.

Last year's march was a moment born out of fear and shock and rage and outrage following Trump's election and in awareness that U.S. leadership influenced global policies.

Two days later, Trump reinstated the "Global Gag Rule" — a policy that banned international agencies that have anything to do with abortion from receiving U.S. aid. This had a damaging impact, particularly in sub-Saharan Africa, not just on access to safe abortions and legal advice related to it, but also to sex education, birth control and HIV testing.

Trump's actions, his rhetoric as well as rising intolerance around the world spurred women to wrest that moment, that day of Jan. 21, 2017, and unleash a movement.

Since then, the world has witnessed the passage of landmark legal judgments. Saudi Arabia lifted the ban on women driving (next on the agenda: end male guardianship). India ruled that sex with a child bride constitutes rape (next on the agenda: criminalize marital rape).

The U.S. saw direct and tangible outcomes from the march. The #MeToo movement resonated worldwide and led to the creation of the Times Up Legal Defence Fund. No longer content with marching and exhorting elected officials to change, American women registered interest in running for office in record-breaking numbers.

Latin America saw women pushing back against Christian and evangelical fundamentalists, according to the Global Fund for Women. It reports works of solidarity across the Middle East and Africa as well.

Canada announced the creation of its Feminist International Assistance Policy, which signalled a game-changing shift in how aid is allocated by reframing women receiving aid not as beneficiaries but as partners. This helps grassroots organizations bring change within their communities rather than implementing an outsider, imperialistic agenda.

Shree Paradkar writes about discrimination and identity. Follow her @shreeparadkar

Read more about: Donald Trump

More from the Toronto Star & Partners

Buying Used: 2013-17... Wheels.ca	SIEMENS Bluetooth hearing aids will change... Hear.com Sponsored Links	Guess who's about to go bankrupt in America Strawberry Research	A Glimpse into the World of Oddball Customs Wheels.com Sponsored Links

Opinion

- CANADA: Canada takes out insurance against NAFTA's collapse with Pacific trade deal
- WORLD: Pacific trade deal gives Canada a strategic win
- OPINION: Do Black migrants lives matter at the U.S.-Canada border?
- NEWS: Landlords should be allowed to ban pot smoking
- WORLD: Indigenous-led conservation offers a path to global leadership and ...

Shutterfly Save up to 50% off SHOP NOW

Top Stories

- CANADA: Canada takes out insurance against NAFTA's collapse with Pacific trade deal
- WORLD: Pacific trade deal gives Canada a strategic win
- OPINION: Do Black migrants lives matter at the U.S.-Canada border?
- NEWS: Landlords should be allowed to ban pot smoking
- WORLD: Indigenous-led conservation offers a path to global leadership and ...

- | | | | | |
|--|--|--|--|---|
| | | | | |
| King St. Plan aims to boost visitors to King St. | Zombie law Plan aims to boost visitors to King St. | Rh disease Plan aims to boost visitors to King St. | Toronto FC Plan aims to boost visitors to King St. | Bentway Plan aims to boost visitors to King St. |

Latest News

CANADA

Police investigate death of student at Halifax university

WORLD

$10, one kind thought and a million lives changed: How one woman in

GTA

Peter Howell: The Shape of Water is the Oscars' best pick for #MeToo

WORLD

Kobe Bryant is an Oscar nominee with short film 'Dear Basketball'

MUSIC

Nashville's soap-opera animals have turned into vegetables

GTA

Top speed skater Viktor Ahn among Russian athletes barred from Pyeongchang Olympics

GTA

Rounding out the all-star rosters on an unofficial ballot

QUEEN'S PARK

Guilt in gas plants boondoggle disguises original sin

OPINION

Thomas Walkom: What did the Vancouver summit on North Korea accomplish? Not much

OPINION

Maple Leafs need to find their stride in the stretch run

MUSIC

South African jazz musician Hugh Masekela dies at 78

Brampton's only "Boutique" Retirement Home

Click for more information

Receive individualized attention. Short term or trial stays available

905-846-1441

World

Advertisement

Get the morning headlines delivered to your inbox

Enter Your Email

WORLD

Sessions is interviewed in Mueller's Russia investigation, the first

CLIMATE

Why citizen scientists are becoming a critical piece of the clean water movement and how stream water in Edmonton

SCIENCE

The science behind why things are the opposite of what they should be

WOMEN'S RIGHTS

Why these top Vancouver companies don't believe in women

QUEEN'S PARK

Guilt in gas plants boondoggle disguises original sin

WORLD

Peter Howell: The Shape of Water is the Oscars' best pick for #MeToo times

2018 JEEP GRAND CHEROKEE LAREDO GET $6,000 IN TOTAL DISCOUNTS* HERE'S THE DEAL

Opinion

COMMUNITY

Six ways to change the world this weekend — without leaving Vancouver

SCIENCE

The science behind why things are the opposite of what they should be

OPINION

Gillian Steward: Calgary wooing the Olympic Winter Games once again

GTA

Top speed skater Viktor Ahn among Russian athletes barred from Pyeongchang

OPINION

Maple Leafs need to find their stride in the stretch run

GTA

Top speed skater Viktor Ahn among Russian athletes barred from Pyeongchang

GTA

Rounding out the all-star rosters on an unofficial ballot

MUSIC

South African jazz musician Hugh Masekela dies at 78

GTA

Rounding out the all-star rosters on an unofficial ballot

Canada

CANADA

Police investigating deaths near Huntsville as triple murder-suicide

The OPP say a friend had stopped by the home for a prearranged visit Friday night around 7:30 p.m. and "came across this tragic scene" and called 911 immediately.

CANADA

Gillian Steward: Calgary wooing the Olympic Winter Games once again

CANADA

Nashville's soap-opera animals have turned into vegetables

CANADA

Why citizen scientists are becoming a critical piece of the clean water movement and how

TripAdvisor has named the best all-inclusive resorts — here's how to book them

Sponsored Links by Taboola

Life

GTA

Accused killer Bruce McArthur's 2003 assault conviction

Though the DNA was taken over a decade ago, former Toronto police homicide cop Mark Valois said it's "absolutely" possible that information aided in his most recent arrest.

- Police release two locations linked to Bruce McArthur
- Investigation into accused killer's use of dating apps stokes tension in Toronto's Gay Village
- Police release two locations linked to Bruce McArthur
- Investigation into accused killer's use of dating apps stokes tension in Toronto's Gay Village

MUSIC

Nashville's soap-opera animals have turned into vegetables

CLIMATE

Why citizen scientists are becoming a critical piece of the clean water

GTA

Top speed skater Viktor Ahn among Russian athletes barred from Pyeongchang Olympics

GTA

Rounding out the all-star rosters on an unofficial ballot

Clear your mind: Three tips to increase productivity

King St. project: Streetcar travel times slashed

New subway line: Toronto, where's your impatience?

Falling: Why falling can lead to success

Toronto FC: Plan aims to boost visitors to King St.

Bentway: Plan aims to boost visitors to King St.

thestar.com

- Feedback
- Site Map
- Newsletters
- New in Homes
- Star Store
- StarAuctions
- Corrections
- Today's News
- Flyers
- CanadaStays
- Contests

Toronto Star Newspapers Ltd.

- About
- Atkinson Principles
- Statement of Principles
- Glossary
- Trust Project
- Subscribe
- Manage My Subscription
- Contact Us
- Contact Webmaster
- FAQ
- News Releases
- Star Internships
- Careers @ the Star
- Star Advisers
- Star ePaper Edition
- Reprint and License

Advertising

- Advertise with Us
- Advertising Terms
- Special Features

Initiatives

- Santa Claus Fund
- Fresh Air Fund
- Speakers Bureau
- Classroom Connection
- Toronto Star Archives

- Toronto
- Vancouver
- Edmonton
- Calgary
- Halifax

- News
- Star Investigations
- Opinion
- Canada
- World
- Business
- Sports
- Entertainment
- Life
- Classified
- Diversions
- Special Features
- Wheels.ca
- TV Listings

Women's March: A year later, women are reshaping the future

Paradkar Columnist

2018

The Women's March in Toronto was one of at least 38 rallies across the country and hundreds around the globe. Toronto's march was defining a new future. On Saturday, that future looked diverse and Indigenous, says Paradkar.

Two years ago that we read headlines such as "Feminism is over, the battle is won. Time to move on?"

